About Chalet Ladroit ...

If you're looking for a very special property in a quiet spot just a short drive from the Aravis pistes, then look no further.

This unique farmhouse close to the village of Les Clefs was built in 1827 by a nobleman from Chambéry who wanted a mountain retreat for occasional visits. They would stay in the south-facing stone part of the chalet, which has light-filled rooms with high ceilings and incredible views over the valley to La Tournette, while the farmworkers live in the wooden parts at the back. In fact, the name Ladroit comes from the old Savoyard term l'adret, which means the best side of the house, facing the sun!

Now the whole chalet is fit for nobility, with modern convenience and traditional comfort sitting side by side.

Chalet Ladroit now takes up most of the building (250m²), although there is a small apartment on the ground floor which is rented privately, and has its own entrance and outside space on the opposite side of the chalet.

You'll need a car (with snow tyres and chains in the winter), but the stunning views from the chalet make the drive more than worth it. The nearest shops are a five-minute drive away in Thônes. Guests can look forward to the sauna, the hammam and an indoor heated pool with contra-current, jacuzzi and massage jets!
